Graduating from San Diego State in 1984 with a distinguished degree in Economics, Mark Kagan's first experience in the workforce was at CB Richard Ellis, where he was trained in the principles of leasing and selling commercial real estate. After seven successful years as a commercial real estate broker, he returned to school to obtain a law degree. Mark went to work as a litigator upon being admitted to the California bar in 1991. After several years of practicing law, Mark returned to the real estate industry where he spent the next 15 years focusing on transactional matters. Over the course of time, he has worked in-house for telecommunications companies, institutional real estate companies, and brokerage companies. The body of Mr. Kagan's experience encompasses the successful negotiation of over 500 leases, license agreements, and easements and the acquisition and asset management of a national commercial real estate portfolio.

From January 1999 to February 2000, Mark served as the liquidating agent for a large portfolio of real estate assets located in 7 states. He was responsible for determining highest and best use, valuation, and the performance of receivership services nationwide.

He has also syndicated and managed investment properties since 2003.

Mr. Kagan is married 17 years, has two boys, and resides in Carlsbad, California. He is an avid surfer and outdoorsman.
